

Mayor Frank G. Jackson Announces New Public/Private Partnership for Cleveland Airport System 克里夫蘭華裔院士黃桑希蘭女士當選為該項目董事會成員

CLEVELAND - Mayor Frank G. Jackson and Henry L. Meyer, III, Chairman of the Greater Cleveland Partnership (GCP), along with Cleveland Airport System (CAS) Director Ricky Smith and

Les C. Vinney, senior advisor, past President and Chief Executive Officer for STERIS Corporation, today announced the creation of the Cleveland Airport System Business Advisory Committee (CASBAC). The Committee is made up of strategic business leaders from across the Northeast Ohio region who will advise on the strategic direction of the airport.

key stakeholders to serve on the committee. The CASBAC has twelve members representing diverse industries throughout the Cleveland Plus Region. Committee Chair Vinney, senior advisor, past President and Chief Executive Officer for STERIS Corporation said the committee will be a valuable partner in helping the airport grow.

"This advisory committee is another example of how my administration works with the business community to accomplish mutual goals," said Mayor Frank G. Jackson. "This group and Director Smith will work together to support one of the region's most valuable economic development tools."

The Committee serves as an independent, non-public advisory body - with no decision-making authority to the Director of Port Control, providing support for the growth of one of the region's largest economic engines, the Cleveland Airport System (CAS). CAS includes Cleveland Hopkins International Airport and Burke Lakefront Airport and creates approximately 5,000 jobs and generates approximately $4 billion annually for the Northeast Ohio region. According to CAS Director Ricky Smith, the committee members will represent the voices from the business community.

"The region's businesses are key users of air service. As our businesses continue to expand markets both domestically and globally, it is important that our airports support this growth," said Committee Chair Les C. Vinney. "By joining with Mayor Jackson - and serving in this advisory capacity - we can help ensure that our airports and air service grow in the ways needed by business."

"The growth of our airports and air service is essential to the region's global competitiveness," said Henry L. Meyer, III, Chairman of the Greater Cleveland Partnership. "We are pleased to re-energize the public/private partnership and focus on strengthening the Cleveland Airport System, as a primary engine for our regional economy."

"The members of the CASBAC are advocates on the street for both the airport and the business community, communicating the airport's priorities as well as the business community's needs," said Smith. "As users of both airports, these members have a vested interest in seeing the airport grow into a premier facility and they are willing to help us get there."

In September 2007, Mayor Jackson announced the City, along with the Greater Cleveland Partnership (GCP), would begin identifying
