MOM'S COOKING UP SOME TASTY FRIED FISH

When you work in a densely populated area such as downtown, grabbing a noontime meal is an especially delicate equation. Getting out of the office can be challenge enough. Time constraints, traffic and parking all factors into the deal.

Just Like Mom's restaurant has part of the equation right. This take-out business, on the fringes of Cleveland's Chinatown area, emphasizes meals-to-go, and does a fairly good job of that. It's a good place to order a bunch of meals, or a single dinner, to take back to your desk.

Just Like Mom's also offers sit-down dining. Customers can also phone in take-out orders.

Around downtown, finding good fried fish is an elusive feat. You'd think we'd be swimming in options, perched as we are on the rim of the Great Lakes. Too often, what end up on our plates are manufactured fillets.

I've gotten good fried fish three times at Just Like Mom's, good enough to go back again - though I won't swear that this was fresh catch. Twice, I shared orders of the red snapper (dinner, $10.99; sandwich, $5.99). Plump and fresh-tasting, each time it still had that briny, vaguely musky flavor that makes it so tasty. We got three big fillets.

We called ahead and placed an order for the white bass dinner ($10.99). When we arrived within the 15 minutes it was promised, the dinner was ready, hot and crisp. Moist, mild-tasting pearly flakes broke off, revealing the occasional bone. A friend shared felt it tasted fishy, but I didn't share that reaction. In fact, I'm afraid I let the order of ribs I was also sharing grow a bit cold as I doted over the fillets.

Colleagues ate up the Polish Boys ($4), a sandwich filled with an enormous and tasty link. The rib dinner combination ($10.99) made decent eating. The bones were thickly clad in fairly tender meat; they were the fall-off-the-bone kind you always hope for. Sweet, sticky sauce coated each bite - not bad.

Where I'm really loved the side dishes. The french fries ($2) were fine, and the cole slaw ($2), a dish that can be so zesty, was delicious. The macaroni and cheese (side, $3) is cheesy, and thanks for the generous portion of greens ($3). As for the corn bread muffins ($3), though they're huge, Mom's are fairly sweet and buttery.

Just Like Mom's is on a winning course.
